For Immediate Release

No venture capital? No worries.

How WebEquity.com.au will change internet business development forever

Sydney, NSW 30 July 2008 - WebEquity.com.au is a new service providing access to internet business development specialists (web developers, designers, marketers, etc.) who are willing to work on an equity or revenue share basis rather than cash payment.

Too often great business ideas are left undeveloped because of a lack of access to the specialist skills required, or a lack of available venture capital to fund those skills (a significant problem in Australia, currently, particularly for web business ideas).

WebEquity.com.au has addressed both issues by creating a community of experts in their field who are willing to work on the development of new business ideas in return for a share of their success. In theory, you could have a new, professionally designed internet business up and running in hours without incurring any development costs.

The brainchild of internet entrepreneur Paul Middleton, the service sprang from Paul's own frustrations at not having the time to develop his internet business ideas. "I haven't been able to launch half of my ideas because I just don't have the time to create them." he said.

"Sharing with a community on the internet in this way could be thought of as risky because there is always the chance that someone will run off with a good idea, but it's just a likely to happen if I developed in private. I could try and produce everything myself, but I'm already too busy!"

"Registering with WebEquity.com.au will mean I finally get some of my projects off the ground, and gives me access to specialist skills to ensure a professional result...10% of something is better than 100% of nothing, and if someone thinks the ideas are good enough to copy, I'll take that as a compliment!"

As well as creating a unique opportunity for business development, WebEquity.com.au allows young, emerging web creatives (designers/developers) to establish a 'live' portfolio and client base and maybe stumble on the next FaceBook or eBay along the way.

WebEquity.com.au is currently recruiting contributors in fields related to all aspects of business and web development. Registration is available on-line at www.webequity.com.au.
